File under "B" for blooper. In last year's diary, we reported that Hank Aaron hit his record-breaking 715th home run "50 years ago." The text should have read "25 years ago." (Good catch, Stephanie Choury!)
Special thanks to Camilla & Chester and to Laura for source materials.

DEAR FRIENDS,

Can it be that a whole year has passed since our last letter to you? The calendar says that it's so, but it doesn't feel as if twelve months have gone by. Time is amazingly flexible, isn't it? When we're children, it stretches endlessly before us, but the older we get, the more we find ourselves wondering where it has gone.

Scientists say there's a reason for this. Apparently, the human brain contains special neurons that act as a kind of internal clock, keeping track of time. The clock is regulated by a chemical called dopamine. The older we get, the less dopamine we produce, so the internal clock slows down. That means our perception of the passage of time is always lagging behind reality. In other words, it may be midwinter out there, but mentally we're hovering somewhere in late fall!

There's another reason time seems to fly by. The fuller our lives are, the less eager we are to let the moment go, to relinquish the pleasures of the present for the uncertainties of the future. We've all been anticipating the arrival of this particular year—the same way we wait for a row of nines to revolve to zeros on the car's odometer—and now we're going to see what's on the other side of this great divide.

The two of us have been talking and thinking a lot about time in this transition year, and you'll find evidence of that in the diary. There aren't any lists of the best or the worst or the greatest—whatever—of the century, but there are quotes, dates, and historical tidbits to interest and amuse you and get you, too, thinking about the passage of time.

To mark the year 2000 as a turning point, you might want to use this year's diary as a kind of time capsule. It isn't a high-tech information storage system, but it has a big advantage over a machine-dependent record. Ten, twenty, even a hundred years after you've used it to record your year, someone will be able to open it and read about the realities of daily life at the turn of the millennium. Just don't bury it—even in a protective case in a protected spot. It's been said that of every thousand time capsules that are buried, only one is ever recovered!

Best wishes for a wonderful year. We'll write to you again in 2001. (It will be here sooner than we think!)

PLANNING AHEAD

December January

"Time has no divisions to mark its passage, there is never a thunderstorm or blare of trumpets to announce the beginning of a new month or year. Even when a new century begins it is only we mortals who ring bells and fire off pistols."

THOMAS MANN, THE MAGIC MOUNTAIN, 1924

"No one ever regarded the first of January with indifference. It is that from which all date their time, and count upon what is left. . . Of all sound of all bells—bells, the music highest bordering upon heaven—most solemn and touching is the peal which rings out the Old Year. I never hear it without a gathering-up of my mind to a concentration of all the images that have been diffused over the past twelvemonth."

CHARLES LAMB, "NEW YEAR'S EVE," 1821

"What's past is prologue."

Good to visit with them. That day - I had a nap after lunch. Enidyn + Bruce came to visit + brought copy of my story to read for correction.

Cooler morning but heated during the day.
We went to early sacrament meeting and stayed for dedication of building since the remodeling. Bro. Stone Peterson dedicated it. Enjoyable services. Came home and ate lunch and Edward resting. Late afternoon we rode west of here to the country. Edward wanted to see livestock. We rode for a couple of hours. Later we visited Pealeys. Watched nurse and to bed.

Aug. 26-02 Monday. Cooler day. Worked in house. Last laundry done. Janalene called and we chatted awhile.
Jami, Nake + Dawn came to visit her last Saturday to bring her birthday presents. I went to Office max + ordered a type ribbon. Cost 6.91. I bought colored folders. Grocery shoped also. After lunch I used the typewriter to type my story.
I can't get the ribbon to reverse so I have to hand re-wind it. A pain. I'm working at it a few hours a day. Evelyn called before noon. I think Bruce was to have an exam today. He didn't call this morning. Valerie called and we are to meet to go to the temple tomorrow morning.
I put water on lawn tonight. Overcast + breezy.

79°/57°
Aug. 27-02 Tuesday. I met Valerie at 10:00 at Ogden Temple and we attended a session. 1st time I have been able to attend in 50 or so months. She had to help me with the clothing at times as I can't get my arm in different positions. Hard to go. I haven't forgotten anything. We ate lunch in cafeteria. Her former brother Karen ate with us. I stopped at Walgreens for a few items. Edward didn't get his hearing aid made. Not a very pleasant. I washed the car in the park car wash.
We wiped it dry. I got new ribbon for typewriter. I typed a couple of hours. Went to bed early. Had a headache.
Evelyn called and they didn't get the report on Bruce's test. He felt so miserable he went to the doctor. He probably should be in of eggs.

Saw Elaine Jensen at store + Howard in hospital since Sunday. High Peterson = Pealeys gave us Pizza pie slices.

Molten, graven, hammer'd, and roll'd;

"If one looks earthward—where these days the pale sunshine lies with the brooding tenderness of a bird upon its nest, patiently awaiting the life about to burst into being—he sees a multitude of little green cornucopias that are pricking their way upward with a vast deal of determination, undaunted by the matted mass of decaying leaves, failing to be driven back even by the late snowfall. These small objects are so closely 'done-up' that they suggest young babies out for their first airing. They have the air of aggressive secrecy peculiar to prize-packets—as if challenging one to guess their contents."

March April

April Fool's Day may have originated in France in the early sixteenth century. At that time New Year's Day was observed on March 25, with the advent of spring. The celebration lasted a week, ending with festivities on April 1. When the Gregorian calendar was adopted in 1564, King Charles IX proclaimed January 1 as New Year's Day. Those who resisted the change or were unaware of it continued to party and exchange gifts the week before April 1. These people were ridiculed for their steadfast attachment to the old New Year's Eve by jokers who sent them silly gifts and invitations to nonexistent parties. April fooling became a French tradition and some 200 years later was adopted in England and then in America.

One of the most famous practical jokes, dubbed the Berners Street Hoax, was played in London in 1809. Novelist Theodore Hook sent out thousands of letters in the name of a woman living on Berners Street, inviting various people to her house at a specific time and date. On that day Hook gleefully watched as the street filled with the delivery wagons and carriages of grocers, painters, undertakers, physicians, tailors, lawyers, butchers, piano movers, and hundreds of others. Even the lord mayor of London and the head of the Bank of England showed up!

"I like to be at home. What's the good of a home, if you are never in it? 'Home, Sweet Home,' that's my motto."

GEORGE AND WEEDON GROSSMITH. THE DIARY OF A NOBODY. 1892

"It seems unaccountable to a superficial observer that the thousands of people who are dissatisfied with their climate do not seek a more congenial one—or stop grumbling. The world is so small, and all parts of it are accessible, it has so many varieties of climate, that one could surely suit himself by searching; and, then, is it worthwhile to waste our one short life in the midst of unpleasant surroundings and in constant friction with that which is disagreeable? One would suppose that people set down on this little globe would seek places on it most agreeable to themselves. It must be that they are much more content with the climate and country upon which they happen, by the accident of their birth, than they pretend to be."

Then the tulip tree near by—the Apollo of the woods—tall and graceful, yet robust and sinewy, imitable in hang of foliage and throwing-out of limb; as if the beauteous, vital, leafy creature could walk, if only it would. (I had a sort of dream-trance the other day, in which I saw my favorite trees step out and promenade up, down and around, very curiously—with a whisper from one, leaning down as he pass'd me, We do all this on the present occasion, exceptionally, just for you.)"

St. Etheldreda, known in parts of Britain as St. Audrey (A.D. 630?-679), was the daughter of a king of East Anglia. She had a reputation for piety and good works. When she was dying of a swelling in her throat, she believed she was being punished for having worn a gaudy lace neckpiece as a child. Over time, such ornaments became known as St. Audrey's lace, shortened to tawdry lace, from which we get the word tawdry, meaning cheap and glittery finery.

In a fairy tale called "The Travels and Adventures of Three Princes of Sarendip," the heroes from Sarendip—the old name for Ceylon (now Sri Lanka)—repeatedly made discoveries by accident. The English writer Horace Walpole was particularly fond of this tale, and in 1754 he coined the word serendipity to describe the princes' good fortune.

In 1890, a letter appeared in the London Times requesting suggestions for a verb to express progression by electric power. Readers offered to mole, to vril, to electrify, to volt, to bijle, to lect, to edison, to electrofer, and to propelect. To motor was eventually decided upon, but the term was never fully adopted by the public.

"The clover blossom and the bumblebee that carries the fertilizing pollen are related; the bumblebee and the mouse that eats up its grubs are related; and every one knows that mice and cats are related; thus the clover, the bumblebee, the mouse, the cat, and, finally, the farmer, are all so interrelated that if the farmer keeps a cat, the cat will catch the mice, the mice can not eat the young bumblebees, the bumblebees can fertilize the clover, and the clover can make seed. BEETON'S BOOK OF HOUSEHOLD MANAGEMENT, 1861

"Our national ideas as to food are in a transition state. We passed from the extreme of pie and doughnuts to the extreme of the vagaries of the Grahamites some years ago. Now we are in an uncertain frame of mind. Vegetarians press their views upon us. Nut foods, manufactured milks, and a hundred forms of cereals are urged for consideration. We hardly know whether we believe this or that. But one thing is certain; we are trying to learn, and we are gradually evolving sensible and hygienic ideas. The best American cooking is unexcelled—if only all of our cooking were the best!"

"[Chess] is a game too troublesome for some men's brains, too testy full of anxiety, all out as bad as study; besides, it is a cholerick game, and very offensive to him that loseth the Mate. William the Conquerour in his younger years, playing at chesse with the Prince of France . . . losing a Mate, knocked the Chessboard about his pate, which was a cause afterward of much enmity between them."

ROBERT BURTON, THE ANATOMY OF MELANCHOLY, 1651-52

"In the four quarters of the globe, who reads an American book? or goes to an American play? or looks at an American picture or statue? What does the world yet owe to American physicians or surgeons? What new substances have their chemists discovered? or what old ones have they analyzed? What new constellations have been discovered by the telescopes of Americans?—what have they done in the mathematics? Who drinks out of American glasses? or eats from American plates? or wears American coats or gowns? or sleeps in American blankets?"

"At a quarter past nine, he merely thought her a very charming young person; at twenty minutes past, he considered her the loveliest woman he ever beheld; at five and twenty minutes past, she was an angel singing his soul away; and at half after nine he was a lost man."

LOUISA MAY ALCOTT, ROSE IN BLOOM, 1876

"I suppose there is scarcely any man... but has been balked in love some time or the other... I wonder what percentage of the male population of the metropolis will be lying awake at two or three o'clock to-morrow morning, counting the hours as they go by, knelling drearily, and rolling from left to right, restless, yearning, and heart-sick? What a pang it is! I never knew a man die of love, certainly, but I have known a twelve-stone man go down to nine stone five under a disappointed passion, so that pretty nearly a quarter of him may be said to have perished; and that is no small portion."

THE NEW FAMILY BOOK, OR LADIES' INDISPENSABLE COMPANION AND HOUSEKEEPERS' GUIDE, 1854

I must not scold, nor whine, nor pout,
Nor move my chair or plate about;
With knife, or fork, or napkin ring,
I must not play, nor must I sing. . . .
I must not talk about my food,
Nor fret if I don't think it good;
I must not say, "The bread is old,"
"The tea is hot," "The coffee's cold";
My mouth with food I must not crowd,
Nor while I'm eating speak aloud. . . .
The tablecloth I must not spoil,
Nor with my food my fingers soil.

ENQUIRE WITHIN UPON EVERYTHING, 1904

"Neither picture-books nor sweeties; but berries strung on long stems of grass, acorns and pretty cones, bits of rock shining with mica, several blue-birds' feathers, and a nest of moss with white pebbles for eggs. 'Dearest Nature, strong and kind,' knows what children love, and has plenty of such playthings ready for them all, if one only knows how to find them."

LOUISA MAY ALCOTT, ROSE IN BLOOM, 1876

"Before I married, I had six theories about bringing up children; now I have six children and no theories."

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER (1647-1680)

200 Years Ago: Washington DC became the official capital of the US, and the Canadian city of Ottawa was founded.

A vintage Thanksgiving postcard. The central illustration depicts a young boy with dark hair, wearing a dark, short-sleeved shirt and dark trousers. He is smiling and holding several large, bright red apples. One apple is held high in his right hand, while others are cradled in his left arm. The background is a soft-focus rural landscape with a barn, trees, and a field. The top and right edges of the postcard are decorated with a floral border featuring red roses and green leaves. At the bottom, the words "A Joyful Thanksgiving" are written in a flowing, cursive script. The entire postcard is framed by a white border.

"When any scholar is able to understand Tully or such like classical author extempore, and make and speak true Latin in verse and prose . . . and decline perfectly the paradigms of nouns and verbs in the Greek tongue, let him then and not before, be capable of admission into the college."

REV. HENRY DUNSTER, FIRST PRESIDENT OF HARVARD, 1636

"To spend too much time in studies, is sloth; to use them too much for ornament, is affectation; to make judgment wholly by their rules is the humour of a scholar. They perfect nature and are perfected by experience: for natural abilities are like natural plants, that need pruning by study: and studies themselves do give forth directions too much at large, except they be bounded in by experience."

FRANCIS BACON (1561-1626), "OF STUDIES"

500 Years Ago: Aldus of Venice founded an academy for the study of Greek classics and invented italic script.
